Utah Olympic Games venue blueprint revealed

A big-air skiing ramp in Pioneer Park. A ski mountaineering course at City Creek Park. Medals ceremonies and concerts inside an MLB stadium. Some of those venues, and indeed some of those events, didn't exist when Utah hosted the 2002 Olympics. Some of the facilities still don't exist.

Lincoln Property Company purchased Class A Salt Lake City distribution facility

CBRE National Partners brokered the deal in emerging U.S. industrial market

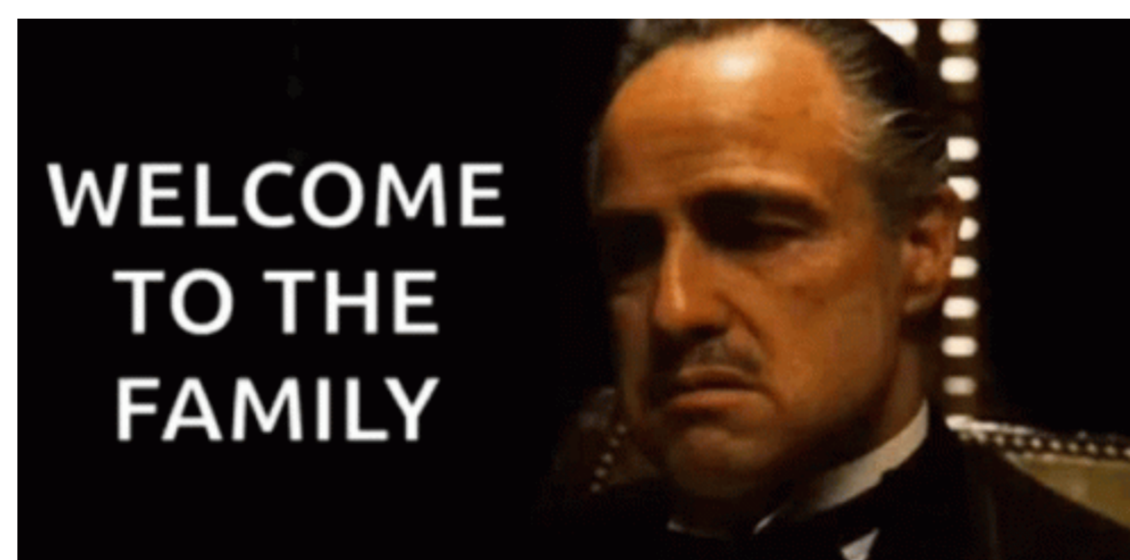

In pictures – Projects on the rise in Depot District, Gateway

The Depot District, also known as the Gateway District, stretches from 400 West to I-15 (~700 West), and North Temple to 400 South. Its history as a transportation hub on the west side of Downtown is still apparent today. But its recent emergence into a mixed-use, dense urban neighborhood is unmistakable.
